Research Plan (or variables to be used) The effect of gender on happiness is repeatedly questioned. My analysis focuses on the role of government (or national) policy on gender equality. Policies regarding gender vary greatly by countries. It is hypothesized that such difference in policy may influence the aspiration towards achievable SES status, as well as create differences in happiness through gender. To examine this hypothesis, I will utilize variables such as gender, happiness and SES status, and confirm whether the relation between happiness and SES differs by gender and country.
Joint Users	<small>It is necessary to submit “List of Joint Users” when multiple users are applying to use the data. If the purpose is for an educational use, and the lecture will be conducted by one person, there is no need to submit the document.</small>		YES <input type="radio"/> NO <input checked="" type="radio"/>

Approval from a scholar (qualified to apply for the JSPS grant) is required, for undergraduate, graduate students and scholars with no affiliation.
